“Collaborate, innovate and recreate!” this was stressed by Ms. Willian S.A. Frias, PAARL’s Secretary, in behalf of Ms. Maribel Estepa, PAARL’s president, as the keynote to open the 3rd Marina G. Dayrit Lecture Series 2015 conducted by the Philippine Association of Academic/Research Librarian, Inc. (PAARL) last July 22 at Megatrade Hall 2, Mega B, SM Megamall.

The theme was “Keeping Updated: The Fundamentals of Collection Development of E-resources in Digital Libraries.” It is to respond to the ever-growing influence of technology in today’s libraries. The resource speaker was Ms. Sharon Maria Esposito – Betan. She pointed out that the utilization of electronic resources is increasingly becoming the most vital sources of information in the library.

Betan mentioned about the difference between Collection development and Collection management. Collection development is more on acquisition while Collection Management is beyond acquisition. Collection development framework includes: (1) Selection, (2) Acquisition, (3) Assessing/ Evaluation of collection, (4) Maintaining and (5) Emerging trends. In every library, there should be a Collection Development Policy (CDP). The written policy will save the librarians from acquiring materials because CDP...(continued on page 2)

Trends in Collection Management ...

has guidelines for selection and maintenance in library. CDP is made public for the awareness everyone who is concern in the library. Moreover, CDP serves as the “bible of the library” since it contains the vision – mission, type of library, fund and responsibility for library. As regards to accessing the users’ needs, know them to market effectively library’s collections and have a faculty academic committee or library committee. This committee will serve as the ones who recommend the acquisition of books, e-resources and other library materials depend on the needs of the institution. The role of acquisition librarians is to facilitate the implementation of the Collection Development Policy (CDP). They coordinate with the management of the book funds, which also includes bookkeeping, ordering and processing of payment. They are the liaison of the library. That is why, she said that the role of the acquisition librarian is both challenging and fulfilling.

Fiscal Management, as discussed by Betan, is a management of the library’s finances. It translates the organization’s mission and goals into monetary terms. Many libraries nowadays subscribe into e-resources such as EBSCO, Science direct and many more. But before a library decides to subscribe to an e-resource, they ought to avail first for a trial period and ask if the vendor offers perpetual access to archival files. If the subscribed database is included in the package, ask if it is capable of doing federated or multiple searches on several databases at once. However, when the time period for access is over, the library should be guided by the following before taking action.

The criteria for continued subscription or renewal are the following:

1. Documented use and potential use
2. Review by acknowledge

3. Abstracting/ Indexing
4. Availability of Access
5. Documented request of cancellation
6. Abolition of an academic program

The Collection Management includes weeding and disaster plan. Betan said that to manage and preserve the collection, the best way is to do preservation, conservation and even micro-filming. Conservation is protecting the physical quantity during transformations or reactions, which means there is a chemical to be used in the library materials most especially in books while preservation has no chemicals to be used.

Overall, the lecture series was enriching and enlightening experience among the librarians and information professionals who attended. The participants were grateful because of the new ideas they acquired. They were fulfilled with insightful and innovative planning. Indeed, this lecture series will be a great help to librarians in managing and accessing electronic resources collection. Congratulations PAARL!

4TH MARINA G. DAYRIT LECTURE SERIES 2015

Librarians' Role in Managing A PLAGIARISM-FREE ENVIRONMENT

By: Ms. Catalina S. Barte

September 16, 2015
Ms. Christine M. Abrigo
Asst. Director for Operations
De La Salle University Library
SMX Convention Center, Mall of Asia Complex

Thieves take or use the property of others without seeking permission, in short, they steal. Aren't you afraid that a thief may be your friend? Your classmate? or your family? Hopefully not your teacher! Thieves may be living with us, or worst, we, ourselves. Why? In this world of technology, information can be easily accessed and the way we retrieve them continuously evolve from time to time. Most people nowadays particularly the students simply copy and paste texts, images, or paraphrase without providing the necessary citation. Some may not be faulted because probably they are not aware of the rules in citing references but others, unfortunately, choose to claim ideas which they do not own. Since the advancement of technology, people can do many great things. Unlike before, we can now order food online and even search for the needed information with a single click. Voila! Information can be conveniently obtained in a second or two.

The PAARL's seminar held last September during the 36th Manila International Book Fair was entitled: "Librarians' Role in Managing a Plagiarism-free Environment". The term "plagiarism" came from the Latin word "plagarius" which literally means a kidnapper was later defined as "An intentional decision not to acknowledge the work of another, thus a person commits the act of academic dishonesty." I think no jail is big enough to accommodate all the violators if there's only an existing law that penalizes those who unwittingly do not give credit to their original source of information. Listening from the talk of the speaker, Ms. Christine Abrigo, about plagiarism, I think what matters is not just knowing that a person can get imprisoned if found plagiarizing but most importantly its implications not only to the originators or inventors but to the society in general. It is more than just the need of being aware that copying or claiming another person's work as one's own is illegal, it is also about giving value to academic integrity, professionalism, and human ingenuity. (continued on page 4)

Sometimes, I cannot help but smile whenever I hear people say that libraries are fast becoming home for spiders and librarians are losing their relevance for I strongly believe that similar with technology, the information professionals also evolve. I also believe that the role of librarians will remain relevant for as long as there is a need for accurate and reliable information. And I quote, “Librarians and other information workers offer services to increase reading skills to promote information literacy.” (Abrigo, 2015). As an information professional, I feel excited and at the same time challenged with the thought of embarking on the role of collecting, storing and disseminating information for the betterment of society. The goal in empowering each individual to be responsible researchers, users, communicators and creators of information not only lies on the hands of those in the academe or other educational institutions but the mission encompasses every one, living and breathing with information. This is a challenge for us, not to raise criminals, but to help contribute to a more enlightened citizenry.
